Prime Minister Trudeau in Conversation with The New York Times

SYNOPSIS: NAFTA may be renegotiated. The Paris climate accord's future is in doubt. NATO is under renewed scrutiny. Refugee policy is the subject of fierce debate. Six months into Donald J. Trump's presidency -- and 18 months into Mr. Trudeau's tenure -- every aspect of Canada's closest and most important alliance is being reconsidered. What are the economic ramifications? How might Canada's role in the global community change? Where is the appropriate balance between values and dollars? These are among the questions the conversation with Mr. Trudeau will explore.
